Wendy - Good to make your acquaintance virtually. I also arrive on Thursday, and have good availability on Friday. What time might work for you?

I'd also be interested in talking with you this week or next a little bit more broadly about Open Libraries and some of the discussions we've been having with other state libraries. Any chance you have time this Wednesday (Jan 9) or next Tues (Jan 15) for a 30 min zoom call?

Saturday is looking really tight. We get in on Thursday to attend COSLA meetings on Friday, and we fly out on Tuesday. Could we do closer to the beginning or end?

Wendy - this is not exclusive to Evergreen - any library in Indiana can take part -

The Evergreen libraries have the advantage of us already having the files to determine the overlap - but anyone can participate.

Let's get together in Seattle - Chris and I both have Saturday open what time works for you?

Wendy and Anna,

** Even though you are canceling - this opportunity is still available for Indiana Evergreen - If you would like to chat more I would welcome a call, meet up at MidWinter - and can organize a chat with Chris from Open Libraries. This is a no cost, no risk opportunity for Indiana to provide eBooks for items you hold in print - hands-free to you folks! ***

As a direct subscriber of the Library.Link Network I'm excited to share with you a new opportunity to bring more value to your annual subscription. Zephhera has been partnering with Internet Archive to help bring visibility to your collection on their Open Library item pages. When looking for a print copy of a digitized item, folks can now click on library.link and have a list of libraries that hold that item within a 500-mile radius.

In addition, our partnership with Internet Archive now offers FREE eBooks for all Library.Link libraries when you participate in the Open Libraries Controlled Digital Lending (CDL) project. How do you join and what do you get when you join Open Libraries?

1. Join Open Libraries. Simply sign onto the project, our simple Google Form is available here: <https://goo.gl/forms/MS335xRFe3aiQ5Fh2> By joining, your library will get a collection at <https://archive.org/details/openlibraries> and you will become part of the community of practice we're building to support the responsible lending of in-copyright materials. By participating, you'll continue to help shape Internet Archive's controlled digital lending service for your patrons and the world.
2. Share your catalog. After joining Open Libraries, Zephhera will provide an export of your ISBN's that you have in print that match the collection of digitized books at <https://archive.org/details/inlibrary>. We will use those matches to increase our lending counts by 1.
3. The Archive has MARCXML records for all of their digitized books in lending - they include the new OCLC number for the electronic resource, as well as links out in 856. Here's a sample: https://archive.org/download/plantphysiology00bidw/plantphysiology00bidw\_archive\_marc.xml

I can provide you a list of the number of overlap for your libraries if interested.

If you would like to get started complete the link to the form above and we will do the rest! Once the collection is created on the Open Library site, the Archive will work with you to get the MARC records so that you can then load them into your catalog for easy access to your patrons.

Open Libraries provides a way for you to offer digitized books to your patrons for free. At the Internet Archive, we've invested a significant amount of energy into making more than 800,000 modern ebooks available and we want to help libraries make use of those books in support of their patrons' reading & research. Happy to answer other questions or provide other points as needed!

Specific questions can be emailed to Chris Freeland, Director of Open Libraries at the Internet Archive, [REDACTED]@archive.org.

We look forward to you joining other Library.Link Network libraries to bring this added value to your libraries.

Here is more information from the Internet Archive on how you can support and participate in the CDL conversation.

1. Endorse the Position Statement on Controlled Digital Lending. You can sign on to the Statement via the online form at <https://controledddigitallending.org/sign> Having more organizations endorse the Statement is valuable in building that community of practice.

2. Start a discussion about controlled digital lending at your library. As we've talked with the wider library community about controlled digital lending, we've found that holding smaller, local discussions have helped librarians understand how controlled digital lending works and how it benefits the library as well as its patrons. We can provide you with materials to use in those discussions, and would also welcome an opportunity to join your discussion virtually.
